4.5. Verb. The verb in Skerre is mildly inflected. The general structure of the verb is TAM – stem – TAM – OBJ – SUBJ, where only one of the TAM slots is filled (and the OBJ slot only filled if there is a pronominal object).

4.5.1. TAM. Tense, aspect, and mood (or TAM) is expressed inflectionally in Skerre. The imperfective for regular verbs is expressed with the prefix hi- and the prefix e- signals what is called the potential, a form that can express futurity, but also obligation or non-reality, depending on the syntactic (and pragmatic) context. The perfective is formed with a suffix, which can have the form -in, -:n, or -yin (following a consonant, short vowel, and long vowel, respectively). The bare stem can be used as an imperative. Thus, the following example paradigm:

Hi?ahor

IPFV.run

‘S/he is running.’

E?ahor

POT.run

‘S/he will run’

Ahorin

run.PFV

‘S/he ran’

4.2 Noun-Forming Derivations

Suffixes are attached to the oblique stem of nouns, and sometimes are accompanied by other changes.

The prefix ha- (or he- when preceding a word beginning in a high vowel) creates a noun meaning “place of X” where X is the original noun or verb.

- (35) a. mar - mother; Hamar - motherland
- b. kwüü - be new; Hegwüü - new land
- c. heri - life; haheri - field
